

WASHINGTON, DC – U.S. Congressman Mike Pence will deliver the keynote address today at the American Conservative Union's annual Conservative Political Action Conference (CPAC). Speaking on the State of the Conservative Movement, Pence will tell his audience that he sees the movement as "strong, o...

Contact: Matt Lloyd

PENCE ADDRESSES CPAC CONVENTION ON STATE OF THE CONSERVATIVE MOVEMENT

Washington, Jan 22, 2004 – WASHINGTON, DC – U.S. Congressman Mike Pence will deliver the keynote address today at the American Conservative Union's annual Conservative Political Action Conference (CPAC).

Speaking on the State of the Conservative Movement, Pence will tell his audience that he sees the movement as "strong, on the advance, but veering off course from our commitment to limited government. The time has come for conservatives to retake the helm of this movement and renew our commitment to fiscal discipline and to what we know to be true about the nature of government."

Who: U.S. Congressman Mike Pence

What: Delivers Keynote address at 31st Annual Conservative Political Action Conference

When: Today, Thursday, January 22, 11 a.m.

Where: Crystal Gateway Marriott

1700 Jefferson Davis Highway, Arlington, Virginia

###